Putting together the Frontiers volumes is not an easy task. This volume has benefited immensely from the efforts of a number of individuals who we wish to thank.

A number of expert researchers in the field commented on the ever evolving table of contents for this volume. Most notable were Randy Aldelba, Sam Bowles, William Darity, the late Bennet Harrison, Katherine McFate, Dani Rodrik, Chris Tilly, William Julius Wilson, and Edward Wolff.

Early in 1998 we met with colleagues in the Tufts community who have related research interests. We received valuable feedback from Ann Helwege, Rachel Bratt, Molly Mead, and Lisa Lynch.

Our GDAE colleague Jonathan Harris played a very important role as kibitzer during our marathon staff meetings to review the literature on inequality. Jonathan will take over as director of the final volume in this series.

Graduate research assistants Johanna Meyer and Vijaya Divurri researched a great deal of the early literature for the volume. Johanna will be acting in the same capacity for the final volume of the series. Graduate research assistant Kim Barry did an excellent job compiling data for the overview essays and helping the staff assemble relevant tables.

Part of the secret of our success is hard-working undergraduate library assistant Stacie Bowman, whose meticulous skills and sense of cheer keep the office humming.

Essential backup and support for all of our activities is supplied by the GDAE office administrator, David Plancon.

We have also been fortunate in receiving institutional support of many kinds. We wish to single out the interlibrary loan office at Tisch Library, which has made possible the retrieval of an astonishing amount of material for this project. Tufts University in general provides an excellent environment for GDAE's research. We have also benefited from the support of Island Press, and Todd Baldwin in particular.

The funders of the Frontiers project, along with those who support the core activities of GDAE, provide another, essential type of institutional support. We are indebted to the following funders of volume 5: the Philanthropic Collaborative, the Andrew Mellon Foundation, Fund for the Future, Ford Foundation, Mrs. George O'Neill, the Richard Lounsbery Foundation, and the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation.
